The Committee, not the individual members thereof, shall have the final authority for deciding on the definitive wording of all rules to be submitted to the IPSC President.

Each of the Discipline Directors shall have a Deputy appointed by the IPSC President to assist them with their work. The Deputies are not members of the Committee, although they are bound by the same Confidentiality clause as Committee members.

Reporting

The Committee reports directly to the IPSC President through its Chairman.

Confidentiality

It is a condition of being appointed to the Committee that all members maintain as confidential any and all materials and information obtained in connection with their participation on the Committee and use such materials and information only in connection with their participation on the Committee. Other than to their Deputy, they will not disclose, distribute or publish such materials and information to any party not authorised by the Committee or the IPSC President in any manner whatsoever. They specifically acknowledge that they will not publish or authorise anyone else to publish such materials and information in any Web posting, article, newsletter, press report and release, publication, or any other communication.
